

Good morning Doctor Mengele. Where's the armband?

You can only think for yourself if you are looking for the information that you really want to find. Everything else is conditioning by the public relations industry, which includes almost all educational institutions today. From this point of view, you might think that I got a bit confused with my approach. One might think so, but that is not what I want. Rather, I have divided this article like a vaccine from its entirety, the information genome, in order to vaccinate each individual. Because now it is factually proven that nobody needs a vaccination against the new death virus. We have almost all been immunised and our immune systems have this information. Rather, an mRNA vaccination is counterproductive and it will most likely cause numerous autoimmune reactions, and thus diseases with no chance of cure. But first things first. Let's first take a trip back in time to a time when medicine was mainly called eugenics, because that's what a worldwide mRNA vaccination is probably going to do. And, please all take a look at the sources of this text. They are extremely important for a complete understanding of this text, if you do not already know them.

She knocked at the door a bit restrained. Please come in, said the doctor's friendly voice. She opened the door and walked unerringly to the chair, sat down on it and said, almost quietly and submissively restrained, good morning, Doctor. The latter, however, did not return the greeting, but stared strictly into her eyes, only to stare decisively at her arm. Oh, startled her, I had forgotten all about it! She pulled her armband out of her handbag and put it around her upper arm. Now he saw the white-green bandage, a sign of her attitude, a green circle that decorated a thicker dot in the middle. Oh yes, did the doctor shine, how beautifully it suits you, don't you think? The woman began to tremble when the doctor stood up and placed a thick leather bag, which had previously been on the floor, on the table. When he opened it, a tear ran from the woman's left eye, her mouth trembled. He interrupted her trembling and asked politely with a slight grin, looking deep into her eyes: "You have forgotten something after all, my dear wife. To which she replied, trembling, "Good morning, Doktor Mengele." "Very well," the doctor replied, "then we can continue." (3).

Two shorter texts from Wikipedia follow to understand that this is not the first time that doctors are being abused for political agendas and that other professions are also involved in the abuse, which should basically be part of humanity (1, 2).

Human experiments under National Socialism

Human experiments in National Socialist concentration camps (1) were numerous medical experiments carried out by doctors and scientists, particularly during the Second World War, on inmates of National Socialist concentration camps, without their consent and without regard for physical integrity and life. These crimes were the subject of the Nuremberg Medical Trial and led to the adoption of the Nuremberg Code of Medical Ethics.

The assumed number of human victims caused by German concentration camp doctors is over 3000. 20 doctors, two administrative experts and a lawyer were held responsible in the Nuremberg Medical Trial. Many concentration camp trials dealt with the medical experiments and their individual perpetrators. On the other hand, many of the physicians responsible were able to continue their careers after the end of the "Third Reich" without criminal consequences. The United States in particular (and to a lesser extent England and the Soviet Union) benefited retrospectively from the experience of the doctors and the results of their experiments: Within the framework of the Paperclip project, a number of aerospace scientists and even such concentration camp physicians were brought to the United States with the intention of scientific progress even before the Nuremberg Trials began, where some of them were active in research for a long time.

Many interest groups, who also commissioned various experiments, profited from the camp experiments: among others, the military as well as the scientific community, the SS as well as the pharmaceutical industry. As the Szczecin exhibition "Gewissenlos - Gewissenhaft" from 2001 shows, Josef Mengele worked closely with the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute for Anthropology, Human Genetics and Eugenics. He regularly sent specimens to the Institute for evaluation and carried out targeted experiments on humans for a research project by the director there, Otmar Freiherr von Verschuer, to find an anti-stain fever serum.

The longstanding process of making amends to the victims of the human experiments is controversial in terms of its guiding principles and effectiveness. In 1951, the Federal Government passed a cabinet resolution in favour of surviving victims of human experiments, in 1959 compensation was made to Polish victims, in 1960 the cabinet resolution for bilateral negotiations with Eastern European states was passed, followed by global agreements with Yugoslavia in 1961/63, Hungary in 1971, Czechoslovakia in 1969 and Poland in 1972. This was followed in 2000 by the Foundation Remembrance, Responsibility and Future, which approved the last application in 2005. No compensation was paid to the victims for the physical and psychological damage.

Medicine and ethics after 1945

The so-called Nuremberg Code (2) is a central ethical guideline currently applied today for the preparation and performance of medical, psychological and other experiments on humans. Since its formulation in the sentencing of the Nuremberg Medical Trial (1946/47), it has been one of the medical-ethical principles in medical training (similar to the Geneva Pledge). It states that in medical experiments on humans:

the voluntary consent of the test subject is absolutely necessary. This means that the person concerned must be legally able to give his or her consent; that he or she must be able to exercise his or her judgement uninfluenced by violence, fraud, deceit, deceitfulness, pressure, pretence or any other form of persuasion or coercion; that he or she must have sufficient knowledge and understanding of the particulars of the field in question to be able to make an informed decision. This last condition requires that the subject, before obtaining consent, be made aware of the nature, length and purpose of the experiment; the method and means to be used; any inconvenience or danger that may reasonably be expected; and the consequences for his health or person that may result from his participation. The duty and responsibility to determine the value of consent is incumbent upon anyone who orders, directs or conducts the experiment. This is a personal duty and responsibility that cannot be passed on to others with impunity.

The experiment must be designed in such a way that fruitful results for the good of society can be expected, which cannot be obtained by other means of research or methods. By its very nature, it must not be arbitrary or superfluous.

The experiment must be designed and based on the results of animal experiments and natural history knowledge of the disease or research problem in such a way that the expected results will justify the conduct of the experiment.

The test should be conducted in such a way as to avoid all unnecessary physical and psychological suffering and harm.

No experiment may be carried out if it can be reasonably assumed from the outset that it will lead to death or permanent damage, except for those experiments in which the person conducting the experiment also serves as the subject.

The risk must never exceed the limits imposed by the humanitarian significance of the problem to be solved.

Adequate preparation and appropriate facilities shall be provided to protect the subject from even the slightest possibility of injury, permanent damage or death.

The experiment shall be carried out only by scientifically qualified persons. The greatest skill and caution at all stages of the experiment shall be required of those who direct or carry out the experiment.

During the experiment, the subject must be free to stop the experiment if he has reached a point of physical or mental deterioration which makes its continuation impossible.

During the course of the experiment, the experimenter must be prepared at all times to stop the experiment if, on the basis of the good faith required of him, his particular experience and prudent judgment, he must suspect that continuation of the experiment could result in injury, permanent damage or death to the subject.

The reader himself may indicate here which points are currently not complied with. With cunning and deceit two ethical standards have already been broken, but more will follow.

Most people are immune to the SARS-CoV-2 virus

Why do I quote this here in such detail and what does the previous one mean? Well, there are three sensational new research findings on the SARS-CoV-2 virus that now suggest what vaccination with an mRNA vaccine could mean. These studies show that 80 to 90 percent of people already have a natural immune response to the virus. For medical reasons, a vaccination, which a certain Bill Gates and a certain Angela Merkel suggest, is not advisable. It might even lead to the exact opposite, i.e. an autoimmune response to its carrier, i.e. every individual who wants or needs to be vaccinated with an mRNA vaccine. Even more! If one understands what an mRNA vaccine can do in the body, better in the genes of those who are administered it, it can be assumed that this vaccine destroys the already existing immune reactions (herd immunity of the whole of humanity!) and that people can thus become permanent patients of the most diverse diseases. In order to understand this more precisely, I link to this text, which can be found on the website www.KenFM.de, three videos(4, 5 and 6), which suggest what I am writing here. I would like everyone who gets to know this point of view to research this himself and thus come to a result, namely his own. In the following I will explain what would most probably happen if 7.7 billion people were vaccinated with an mRNA vaccine. Which, by the way, is not really a vaccination at all, but a cunning attempt to deceive humanity, and thus would be a breach of the Nuremberg Code of Physicians, who would administer this vaccine to people. Draw your own conclusions and look at the whole picture, the process of vaccination and ask yourself cui bono, who is the advantage if nobody knows where the mRNA vaccine goes when it is injected. It has the potential to go anywhere in the body and direct cells to produce parts of the virus. Let's give Professor Dr. Sucharit Bhakdi a chance to speak: The work has proven that killer lymphocytes already exist, in the normal population, although the virus has not been there at all, killer lymphocytes that attack cells infected with the new virus have already existed. And this is probably the reason why 80 to 90 percent of the population in Germany did not become seriously ill. (...) It's one second to midnight. We have to get up! The population must stand up and realize that they are in immense danger because the new vaccination strategy is, we will use a gene based vaccine.

A mass mRNA vaccination could reduce the population

Nobody knows where the gene goes and what kind of body cells it selects to multiply. Since this completely new vaccine for humans is not being tested, long-term studies of up to ten years, perhaps even longer, are needed to find out what damage this gene alteration can cause in humans, at different stages of development, age and gender. But all this is not being done. The aim is to provide as many people as possible with a vaccine as quickly as possible, whose herd immunity has long since been achieved by the other 20 or so types of corona virus in us. This is not an assumption or a rhyming of the author. Three studies prove and substantiate that humans do not need to be vaccinated at all. Please make this clear by checking all sources of this text. Conversely, I would like to say that the politicians and all the people who want to provide us with an mRNA vaccine know exactly what they are doing. I claim that this is exactly their agenda! The mRNA vaccine is a Trojan horse that benefits population reduction. I see no other purpose, because it does not protect anyone. It sets off high-probability autoimmune responses in humans. This means that parts or regions of our bodies are seen as enemies of the immune system and are then fought with everything possible. We know from transplantation medicine that people who have had organs transplanted, that these organs are first understood as an enemy in the body by the person who received the transplant and that these people then have to take a few tablets throughout their lives, which are not without side effects. Furthermore, depending on the degree of transplantation, these people have to adapt their whole lives to this autoimmune reaction.

What is the conclusion of this strangely collaged viewpoint?

Corona is like 9/11, the Kennedy assassination, the Epstein paedophile ring or let's get to the point, the elite satanic clubs (7). Most of them are poking into the collaterals because they sense the Sherlock Holmes in them and meticulously search in the details around the virus. I try to place all the details side by side on the floor and then look at everything. That's what I've been doing for the last few months. I don't think the German government doesn't really know what it's doing.

I don't think it was all an accident or an overreaction by the government, because the government itself, in fear of the virus, wanted to pull out all the humanistic stops to keep mortality as low as possible. And now, with all the Corona false alarm, the government is trying to cover up its own failures, with another lockdown and other rigid measures, like masks for pupils and primary schools etc. I believe it is acting with intent, because behind this virus is an agenda, the decimation of the world population. If you put together what the governments of the world are doing almost all in unison, you get the big picture. But what was the reason for equipping all governments with this agenda? To understand this, one must understand how the world economy and the financial aristocracy, the money printers, are put together and what their all-decisive engine has been and is. Because this engine, to put it mildly, is being suspended, or, to put it mildly, held in check by the current wild hair presidential trump. This is the rather complex war economy, without which the Western financial capital flows will come to a standstill. That is also the reason why there is currently great unrest in the United States and why a Mr Biden is being courted everywhere as an alternative to Trump. You knew that Trump would oppose the establishment of this industry if he, and not Hillary Clinton, became president. The Black Lives Matter movement is in this sense also a counterrevolution against Trump's anti-war economy and not, as the naive with left-wing waving flags of the anti-fascists joyfully perceive a new enemy in their carousel of violence, a movement against racism. The military-industrial-media complex via Deep State of the Democrats and their numerous non-governmental bodies and friends in the cause in the USA, as Thomas Röper put it on his Anti-Spiegel, is most likely the initiator of this whole pandemic. If that is true, then it is clear that US President Donald Trump, should he become US President again in the coming election, is in great danger.

The crisis is a crisis of consciousness

That is why these mass demonstrations of the BLM anti-racism movement in Germany and worldwide, without mask or distance, were cheered by all politicians who betrayed the true interests of the people. The lateral thinking and hygiene basic law demos however massively tried to prevent and stigmatize. At the forefront of this are all the warmongers of the USA, from the Clintons to the Bushes, to the Obamas and all the war profiteers of the Western world. In the background, as almost all alternative financial experts write, a financial and industrial war is raging, in which the winners are above all those who can adapt quickly and without grumbling to a new form of financial economy. And these are the vaccination and surveillance markets, as well as their supplier industries, worldwide. Which includes Amazon, Google, and especially many network providers. In 2018, Professor Shoshana Zuboff, one of the eleven most original economic thinkers in the world, published a book of over 700 pages entitled "The Age of Surveillance Capitalism", which is slowly gaining more and more attention here in Germany. Read it if you want to stay in the picture.

The vaccination industry is the surveillance of people, indeed of the whole of humanity as patients who will lose their independence and be transferred to the status of the monitored sick person (10). Your body becomes their weapon, which they can use against you at any time - until self-disposal via autoimmune reactions. In this way we become an eternal patient. What this can mean, you can experience for yourself in every person who has an autoimmune disease. Please inform yourself, it is five to midnight, as Professor Bhakdi himself has determined. Let's hope that he is right and that it is before midnight and not after midnight.

If there are no wars in the world, many industries will automatically become superfluous. I realize that I have described all this quite thinly in this short article. To explain it all in more detail, I need a book again. Before Trump, the global markets were already broken before Trump, and they were just plugging holes. Trump, however, resists to plug these holes for the other players. America first, that was and is his motto. However, most European heads of government still think in terms of the old political system of post-war Europe. They do not cut their throats and probably cannot, because even the EU is a child of this post-war order. They all had to hand over sovereignty to this octopus, the EU. To regain it requires courage and brave politicians, opposition forces. But they do not exist in Germany. Even the AfD is muzzling itself, does not murmur, and has long since been transformed into Merkel's lapdog with the knowledge of the agenda of the pandemic. It would need a political thinker with great abilities, who understands that all our self-made problems are problems of our consciousness and that we should take the next step with our consciousness, if we want to survive this. This would have to move the whole of humanity in this century, a revolution of consciousness. But this is now being prevented by a SARS-CoV-2 pandemic. And this with the completely satanic tools, which have also so far gone through all changes.

The laboratory pandemic invents the saber-toothed tiger

Sucharit Bhakdi says it is just before midnight, meaning that we have little time left to turn the tide. If we do not succeed, I believe that a completely rampant fascism, which has completely eroded humanity, will rule this world, in which people must first be greatly reduced. Because the previous consumer corporatism, I deliberately do not call it capitalism, is over. It is recognized, right up to the top, that consumerism is eating up this earth and in the end all will die out. Only it does not work out the way Dirk C. Fleck described the ecodictatorship in his futuristic novel GO!

It was never about a killer virus, it was about a Trojan horse. And SARS-CoV-2 is perfect for this, because a PCR test, which doctors only use for laboratory tests, can be used to convince the population that the virus is pandemically distributed, as all flu, corona and cold viruses do. They are pandemically distributed. And since the vast majority of the population carries a wide variety of corona viruses, usually in a symbiotic process, which is sold to the public as an infection, they can sell to humanity via the WHO, politicians and the media that only the infection figures, i.e. the PCR measurement results, represent the pandemic.

And so, every day, measurement figures appear which are whipped through the media as infected persons, which is equated by the unread virus phobic with the spread of a deadly virus. Doctors, virologists and epidemiologists who see through this speak of a laboratory pandemic. But the vast majority of the population, who are terrified, panicked and terrified, do not want to take note of this. Anyone who is trapped in such a state can easily get straight A's and three doctorates. The mind goes blank and self-preservation takes over the entire cerebral cortex as superconductor. This archaic compulsion was very important a long time ago. But today they use it to carry on their agendas and to play us off against each other. Even a Professor Hendrik Streeck, who is the only one among them who has done research on it and who has more and more profound knowledge to contribute to it than a Professor Wieler and Professor Drosten combined, is scolded by the media and shunned by the government; cui bono, whom do you think that benefits? Certainly not the more than 80 million people in this country!

The sabre-toothed tiger is now the neighbour, or the one who does not wear a mask, the one who was on holiday, the one who is infected. The mask is an important factor stabilizing the internal processes, because it reminds us of rule number one every day:

You are only right and good if you obey our order.

In April 2020 we invited the biologist and genetic researcher Dr. Bernhard Kegel to his book "Die Herrscher der Welt" (11) for the programme MPathie on KenFM. What he explained there should make many people think. We humans have about 50 to 80 trillion of our own cells in our bodies, of which we consist. In addition, our bodies are inhabited by about 80 to 100 trillion bacteria and viruses in symbiosis with our bodies. If we were to remove them, we would die instantly, because they take over vital processes in our entire body that we cannot do without them. Viruses and bacteria were before all other living beings on this planet. Consequently, they are an enormously important part of the evolution and thus the development of everything that lives here. Only very few viruses and bacteria are harmful or even deadly for us. The total biological weight of all viruses and bacteria far exceeds the total weight of all living beings and life forms on this planet! The corona viruses have been in us and with us for a very long time.

The real pandemic is in our minds

If one studies the doctors in the Third Reich, one will soon be reminded of Josef Mengele when vaccination through the back door becomes compulsory. The doctors in the Third Reich, who did bestial things, were not commissioned to do so by the government of Hitler at that time. It was the other way round. Doctors approached the government with the request that all this could be done now after all, and Hitler granted and allowed them to do what they wanted with their lives, which were not worthy. The most unworthy among them wore armbands, and the "most valuable" among them also wore armbands, identification marks that revealed the unconscious parts of psychological cruelty, and that could be carried out without restraint. What emerged here and led to the cruellest of excesses was later called the Stockholm Syndrome. In Stockholm there was a bank robbery with hostages. In time, the hostages allied themselves with the bank robbers, fearing that the police forces could not guarantee their lives and that they themselves could die in an exchange of gunfire between the bank robbers and the police.

The Stockholm Syndrome, like the Münchhausen Syndrome, in which illnesses or disabilities are merely feigned in order to attract attention, or the Münchhausen-by-proxy syndrome, in which the authority of the person obliged to care, usually the children, deliberately inflicts illnesses in order to be able to be the focus of attention, are today once again systems of the unconscious that are increasingly capturing people's consciousness. The milieu for this has been prepared. I believe that this does not happen by chance, but follows an agenda. The block leader or hanger-on resembles those who suffer from Münchhausen-by-proxy syndrome. Also the Milgram experiment, an obedience experiment in which the test person, unaware that his victim is an actor, pretends to be scared to death but an authority assures the test person that the next higher electric shock must be given without even refusing to allow the experiment to proceed, is a very useful behavior in the psychology of the masses, which we can see crystal clear today as political tools. For the layman, all this is understandably very incomprehensible. We easily obey the instructions of an authority when it claims to bear full responsibility for the consequences of our actions.

There has never been a pandemic situation of national importance!

Will we still manage to turn the tide and hold politicians to account? I believe we can only do so if the police, the armed forces and the judiciary join us. But this, in turn, can only happen if the people working in it become aware of what a Wolfgang Wodarg and Sucharit Bhakdi are trying to explain all the time. But this information can no longer enter the brains of the frightened people by means of the mind alone. Rather, the people who live only in and through their fears and believe everything that comes out of the tube (12) must become aware of their self-esteem again. The problem of their fears is not the virus, it is the Stockholm Syndrome Light that binds them together with their tormentors in survival. The frightened mass is trapped in survival mode, that is, where there is no mind, only the clinging to survival when the instructions are followed. The psychoanalyst Arno Gruen has explained this very well in his works and in easily understandable language. And the psychologist Bernd Seligmann then created from it the learned helplessness, which he, together with the Pentagon, used for white torture against the War on Terror in Guantanamo and other Black Sites. That is why what we are all currently experiencing as a pandemic is also a form of torture. For example, wearing masks for children and young people in class. Having to pay horrendous amounts of fines when regulations are violated. Financial bankruptcy, the abandonment of self-employed people with high debts, which must still be paid off afterwards, etc. Everything that leads to trauma and has been and will be ordered by the state and federal government is in this sense torture, because the justification of the pandemic situation of national importance has never been given by SARS-CoV-2. Had a round table with qualified different scientists been held beforehand, the conclusions that the government ultimately reached would never have been reached. The disproportionate nature of a lockdown, with large parts of the economy and social life shutting down, would not have been met. But today we also know that it was never about humanitarian reasons for the risk groups. Ultimately, mRNA vaccination is a form of torture and a crime against humanity, period.

Just before the Third Reich, it must have been all similar. Maybe in the beginning the majority of Germans were not behind Hitler. But with time, Hitler himself became the solution to all problems for the vast majority. From everywhere zealots who wanted to do the same, who wanted to show that they were recognized people in obedience to his system, good citizens, showed and came. In 1920 the swastika armband was introduced by the National Socialists as a combat armband. And so the conformity went around every neck of the Germans and the majority of them did what the Führer ordered, wrote down and said. Whoever sees through today sees parallels to the system of that time. In truth, history never repeats itself. What does repeat itself are the weaknesses of the people, which only become apparent when adversity comes and the way out appears blocked. The squirrels will come and relentlessly carry out the banality of evil as wheelwork. Drosten and Wieler and others are already there, a söder, a laschet, and the others perpetuate themselves to this banality because they want posts and power, and when asked why they are doing all this, they answer in complete amazement because we want the good, we do good, period!

Every day there are more and more of them. Just like then, when there is no escape and it is far too late to retreat, they will say that they knew nothing about all this and that they were only following orders, rules or regulations and that they were doing their duty either as officials or as conscientious citizens. An order is an order, said the pilot who dropped the bomb in Hiroshima when he was asked if he regretted anything about it, an order is an order, and that is what you have to follow. Needless to say, they are bathing themselves in self-deception, all of them, because it is as true today as it was then that they have voluntarily chosen not to know all this. And that is what makes them accomplices and not innocent lambs who would have known nothing.

If fascism will come back, it will say that I am anti-fascism. And when eugenics will come back, it will say that I am humanism. And when the commander of a concentration camp will come back, he will say, that i am the epidemic fighter. And when they break the windows and beat people outside again, they'll say we won't be infected by your death. Admittedly, it all comes back because we suffer from transgenerational looking away and denying our traumas, which are milled and inoculated by this system, without even noticing the suffering. We project it into the world and use it to slay others. It is easier to get an image of the enemy than to confess to being a part of the human family and to act accordingly, to be and remain in love. We still have the chance to reach love.

But if we do not bundle our forces, we will soon have to knock on a door, whereby we will be answered with a friendly entry and we will go in and reply "Good morning Dr. Mengele". But then don't forget your muzzle, the identifying mark of your sacrificial caste, which indicates that you belong to the autoimmune patients who, before they dispose of themselves, are still prescribed to the plaything of satanic pleasure. Resistance requires wise action and less wise speech. But before acting, please do not forget the analysis of this.

Adolf does not sleep. He is still in his fertile womb and wants to crawl out of it. By the way, an Adolfine does it just as gladly.
